When it comes to holidays, it can be challenging to steer away from annual traditions. As far as the Thanksgiving feast goes, wines like Pinot Noir and Beaujolais are reliable and popular selections. But instead of reaching for tried-and-true pairings, we encourage you to broaden your palate and pour something different this year. To help, we've selected a diverse mix of wines from throughout the world, with plenty of intriguing and affordable options to explore.

It's best to choose food-friendly wines that won't clash with any Thanksgiving dishes. Fuller-bodied reds can be challenging, especially those with oaky notes or high levels of tannins, so it's better to go for light-to medium-bodied wines with good natural acidity. Bodegas Faustino's bright and fluid Rioja is a no-brainer, thanks to its cherry and floral flavors with light accents of orange peel, cedar and tea. Similarly, Alessandro Costa's Nebbiolo is a light and airy choice, but offers firmer structure, along with strawberry, cherry and pepper notes.

Cabernet Sauvignon would typically be a tricky pairing. But Domaine Eden, based in California's cool-climate Santa Cruz Mountains, has produced a sleek and fresh version that will impress your guests with its zesty loganberry and boysenberry notes. And if you're entertaining any Pinot Noir fans, there are plenty of impressive versions to try here, coming from Oregon, California, France and Chile.

White and sparkling wines are great for sipping before or throughout the meal, especially those with high levels of acidity that can cut through rich fare and cleanse your palate. With its firm acidity and round texture, Bodegas La Cana's Albariño is an excellent candidate. Suavia's crisp Soave Classico also fits the bill, offering juicy notes of ripe melon and nectarine. For bubbly, Segura Viudas' cava is an elegant option with raspberry notes and a delicate underpinning of smoky minerality, and Cleto Chiarli e Figli offers a great value with its creamy Lambrusco, which displays ripe boysenberry, wild cherry and citrus peel notes. It's a bold choice, but will pair well with pre-dinner charcuterie, cheeses, smoked turkey and sausage-laced stuffing.

PLANET OREGON

Pinot Noir Willamette Valley 2019
